

Dominic Whiteman is Chairman of V7 Europe www.v7europe.com - the pan-European investigative team. V7 was formed to investigate extreme Islamist culturalist encroachment in Europe - this includes the growth of extreme Islamist Faith schools, Sharia Councils, Honour Violence and other prevalent aspects of the Islamist project.

From August 2005 to May 2008 Dominic ran the European arm of the private investigation network, VIGIL www.vigilnetwork.com

The Vigil Network - with over forty members worldwide (half of whom are focused solely on monitoring virtual fake-jihadi and jihadi activity) - has been behind many successful investigations and some high profile exposes. In the UK these exposes have included the BBC's Hizb ut Tahrir expose of November 14th 2006 and the law-changing Radical British Libraries' book stock exposes of September 2007 (see www.vigilnetwork.com media section). Dominic has worked with the media, think tanks, advocates and politicians across Europe and the United States to investigate and expose culturalist, conveyor-belt and actual terrorist threats from extreme Islamism and other subversive, terror-related threats (notably the LTTE "Tamil Tiger" threat to Sri Lanka).

Born in England in the early 1970's, educated at a well-known British boarding school and the London School of Economics, Dominic has travelled and worked in a variety of countries and continents.

Dominic specializes as a counter terror adviser on Sri Lanka (BBC News and BBC World) and UK Islamism (appearing in the past on BBC News, BBC Newsnight, ITV, & Channel 4). He has been interviewed for radio and TV as an independent terrorism expert. He writes for a range of publications and is currently the Editor of the Westminster Journal www.westminsterjournal.com.

Dominic is a member of the Conservative Party of Great Britain & Northern Ireland - his motto is that "there is a mainstream solution to every political problem" and describes his political stance as close to centre. Dominic is a regular speaker at public debates and conferences - speaking mostly on the terror threat or preventing extremism.

Aside from investigative and political work, Dominic is Vice-President of an English rugby club and - with his wife - helps out with special events at a homeless charity. He is an honorary member of his local rifle and pistol club. He lives with his wife and man-eating dogs in London, England.